Children march for peace, action

Chicago Tribune

Following the deaths of Jonylah Watkins and 15-year-old Hadiya Pendleton, activist Beverly Reed-Scott helped organize the Young People's Peace March and Rally to call attention to the children suffering on the South Side. The event was scheduled for Memorial Day, the typical start of the summer season and often-deadly months in the city's crime-plagued neighborhoods.

"We were already reeling from Hadiya's death, but when baby Jonylah was shot, there was a wave of fear that reached all of us. We thought, 'Not the babies. Please, not the babies,'" Reed-Scott said.

About 100 school-age children participated in the march, which kicked off just a few blocks from President Obama's Kenwood home. Eight-year-old Caitlyn Smith addressed the crowd, reading a short speech from her Hello Kitty notebook.

"Violence isn't the answer," she said. "If violence is the first thing that you think about when there's a problem, think again."

Carlee McKinney, 12, said he stopped playing outside after the deaths of Hadiya and Jonylah because he was scared about what could happen. His fears have ebbed somewhat recently, but he still prefers to stay inside with the doors locked.

"I want it to get better, so maybe being in this march will help," he said.

The march ended just as police scheduled a news conference to announce Koman Willis' arrest in Jonylah's death. Reed-Scott saw the criminal charges as an affirmation of the rally's purpose.

"It's amazing to have [Willis] arrested on the day that we stand up for peace," she said. "It shows that the universe wants the violence to end."

IN THE CROSSFIRE

POLICE: 6-MONTH-OLD JONYLAH WATKINS WAS KILLED OVER AN XBOX

Chicago Tribune

Six-month-old Jonylah Watkins was killed after being caught in crossfire over a stolen video game console, Chicago police said Monday as they announced an arrest in a murder case that has come to symbolize the city's deadly gun culture.

Authorities charged Koman Willis, 33, with killing the infant and shooting her father while they sat parked in a minivan in Woodlawn on March 11. Jonylah died the following day from a bullet that entered her right shoulder and traveled down through her left thigh. Her father, Jonathan Watkins, survived multiple gunshot wounds.

Jonathan Watkins, 29, had been Willis' intended target "in retaliation for a stolen video game system," Police Superintendent Garry McCarthy said. The animosity began after an Xbox was taken from Willis' Chatham apartment and then sold to someone else in the neighborhood, according to law-enforcement sources.

When the new owner hooked up the system at

Koman Willis

THE SUSPECT'S RECORD

According to court records, Willis has been arrested 46 times going back to 1996. His convictions include:

2002: Aggravated assault of a police officer; sentenced to three years in the Illinois Department of Corrections

2007: Drugs; sentenced to one year in prison

2005: Drugs; sentenced to one year in prison

1998: Weapons; sentenced to probation home, he saw it belonged to Willis, a fairly well-known figure in the neighborhood and a convicted felon with more than three dozen arrests dating back to 1996. Not wanting any trouble, the new owner returned the game console to Willis and told him that he purchased it from Watkins, the sources said.

Willis began questioning people about Watkins and a short time later he opened fire on Watkins' minivan as he sat with Jonylah in the front seat, police said. Willis then escaped in a blue conversion van spotted on surveillance video near the scene, according to authorities.

Police have not located the van or the gun used in the shooting, McCarthy said. Authorities identified Willis as a possible suspect early in the case, but did not have enough evidence to charge him until detectives convinced several witnesses to fully cooperate with the investigation last week.

Willis turned himself over to police Saturday, accompanied by his attorney, and is expected in bond court Tuesday.

Who to avoid on the CTA

GOING PUBLIC

Tracy Swartz

 @tracyswartz

Memorial Day is the unofficial start of summer, though a quick look at a thermometer may cast doubt on that theory. Nevertheless, summer tourism season means more crowds on the CTA. The upkick in ridership means an increase in the likelihood of spotting these five unsavory character types on buses and trains. Though the weather's a bummer (for now), don't let these CTA riders ruin your summer.

» Fanny Pack Jack: Tourists are easy to spot. Look for the confused stares, the crumpled maps and the duck move. Fanny Pack Jack likely will stop all the buses on Michigan Avenue to duck in and ask the driver 1,000 questions about tourists traps. (Sample queries: Where is Navy Pier? How far away is the art museum? Am I in Chicago?) Meanwhile, his wife, Mag Baggage, will take up multiple seats with her luggage while other riders stand.

Although Jack and Mag are annoying, let's help them by explaining how to get where they are going and where to place their luggage so they don't slow down the driver or boarding process. The more you aid tourists, the faster they'll get to the American Girl store at Water Tower Place.

» Doug Muggen: The presence of Fanny Pack Jack and Mag Baggage on the CTA tends to attract Doug Muggen.

First things first: Hide your iPhones, iPads and laptops. E-mailing your boss or texting your beau are not good reasons to risk losing your phone—and possibly getting hurt in the process.

Pay special attention on the new combined Green and Red lines now that the CTA has shuttered the southern section of the Red Line and shuttled passengers to the Green Line. Police last week issued community alerts for iPhone robberies in the Loop and near the 35th/Bronzeville/IT Green Line stop.

» Smelly Ellie: Straps have become more fashionable since the CTA started rolling out more of its new rail cars with aisle-facing seats on the Red, Green and Pink lines. The design of the car encourages those who can't find a seat to hold the hanging straps.

But with Smelly Ellie, it's the stench of underarms that seems to hang around. Riders, invest in deodorant! Two dollars can go a long way on the CTA—both in distance and in scent.

» Cole Stroller: The CTA began a campaign last year to inform riders of the agency's stroller policy. Here's a breakdown: If there's no room for your stroller on the bus, fold it up. Don't put it in the doorway or in priority seating if there's a rider who needs the seat, which is intended for the elderly and riders with disabilities. Leave your double-wide ride at home.

» Harry O. Stereo: We get it. It's (almost) summer. Time to celebrate—but do so quietly. Traffic jams aren't an excuse to pump up the jams on your cellphone. A train that isn't moving isn't an excuse to show off your moves. Many riders are on the CTA to get to work, not to see you twerk.

STATIONARY A weekly dispatch from a CTA station of note

This week: Addison Brown Line

Numbers-wise, this North Center station isn't doing so well compared with its Brown Line counterparts. This year through March, the stop saw its ridership dip by 2 percent versus the same period last year. Its neighbor to the north, the Irving Park station, saw a 4 percent jump while its neighbor to the south, the Paulina station, saw a 4.5 percent increase.

The Addison station, though, is all about the numbers. The station has a bronze art installation on its walls that duplicates Cubs legends Ron Santo's handwriting to depict the box score for the May 14, 1969, baseball game between the Cubs and the San Diego Padres, according to the CTA. For those keeping score, the Cubs won 3-2, thanks to Santo and Hall of Famer Ernie Banks. Next up: Roosevelt on the Red, Orange and Green lines

NEW TREND IN POT TOURISM: BAKE-CATIONS

By Tracy Swartz | REDEYE

Voluntourism—spending breaks volunteering for charitable causes—became popular in 2007.

Staycations—staying close to home for vacation—are so 2010.

This year, the trend in vacations is much more relaxing. “Bake-cations,” a RedEye word for travel to Colorado and Washington—which last year legalized recreational marijuana use—are all the buzz.

The two states are seeing an “incredible surge” from hundreds of thousands of tourists interested in smoking pot legally, trip guru Arthur Frommer said at a L.A. travel event earlier this year. Though some Americans believe smoking weed is morally wrong, pot tourism is a budding industry—if 4/20 events in Seattle and Denver are any indication.

On April 20, the unofficial pot smokers’ holiday, nearly 1,200 people celebrated the second-annual Dope Cup, a marijuana competition in Seattle that honors the best strain, highest concentration and most flavorful weed among Washington growers. Last year, the Dope Cup attracted 350 audience members, a sellout crowd of Washington medical marijuana patients.

In Denver, packages for the inaugural World Cannabis Week, which ran from April 17-21, sold out quickly, said Matt Brown, co-founder of My 420 Tours, a Colorado marijuana trip company. More than 100 people participated in the week’s events, including workshops on how to make and cook potent weed recipes and a tour of a medical marijuana dispensary.

REDEYE ILLUSTRATION

The Colorado experience cost some green, though. A five-day package, which included happy-hour parties, a concert and airport pickup, cost $649. A VIP five-day package, which included another concert, was $849 while a three-day excursion cost $499.

About a half-dozen participants were from the Chicago area, and the average age of all tour-goers was 40, Brown said. His group plans to announce more Denver tours.

"We didn't invent the idea of smoking pot on vacation," Brown said. "But there are millions of adults across the United States who are just thrilled by the idea ... of just stepping away from their life and not worrying for a minute."

James Zachodni, editor of Dope Magazine, which hosted the Dope Cup in Seattle, said his event drew a national audience. Tickets sold for $35.

Participants went to a latex fashion show, glass blowing demonstrations and a "clab bar," which involves inhaling highly concentrated smoke. He expects his event to grow even more next year.

"Right now, it's us and Colorado, so we really think we'll become a tourist destination like Amsterdam was," Zachodni said. (About 1.5 million tourists visit Amsterdam annually for marijuana consumption, according to news reports.) "I think it's going to be a fun and cool reason for people to check out Washington state."

A Washington state study found that revenue from marijuana could reach $2 billion over five years. Both Washington and Colorado allow adults 21 and older to carry up to an ounce of marijuana, but the states have struggled with creating rules for retail sales.

Plus, they may not be the only pot spots for much longer. Other places considering legalizing recreational marijuana include Maine, Vermont and Oregon; the idea is gaining momentum nationwide.

A study released in April by Washington, D.C.'s Pew Research Center found that 52 percent of those polled favored legalizing marijuana while 45 percent opposed legalization.

Those who were against legalizing marijuana said pot could lead to use of hard drugs, while others said it's morally wrong.

Of the millennials surveyed, 65 percent support making weed legal, up from 36 percent in 2008.

Illinois lawmakers this spring approved legislation to legalize marijuana for medical patients, and the bill is awaiting Gov. Quinn's signature. And though marijuana still is illegal in Illinois, not all young Chicagoans are anxious to take bake-cations.

Sophia Madana of Uptown happened to be visiting friends in Seattle during the 4/20 holiday but said she didn't partake in the festivities. She wondered whether tourists who did celebrate the day had any concerns about random drug testing at their jobs.

She said marijuana events don't interest her, and instead, she had a clam bake-cation and ate a lot of oysters.

"It was not a priority while we were out there," said Madana, 28. "My friends insisted I needed to eat a lot of seafood."

Still, Zachodni said that smoking marijuana is becoming more appealing to some as the stigma associated with it wears off.

"Before, it was a little more taboo, and now even the 9-to-5 people working in their cubicles are starting to come out. It's not just the hippies," Zachodni said. "It's not frowned upon anymore like it was for years and years."

BURNING QUESTIONS

Know before you grow—RedEye rounds up the rules for tourism pot spots and compares them to Illinois. —rs

COLORADO

In November, the state made it legal for adults 21 years and older to carry up to one ounce of marijuana. The state Legislature earlier this month spelled out a framework for recreational marijuana sales. Some proposed rules would require retailers to grow 70 percent of what they sell until October 2014 and limit out-of-state residents to buying only a quarter-ounce at a time. Retail sales likely wouldn't start until January.

WASHINGTON

As of December, adults 21 years old and up can carry up to one ounce of dried marijuana.

The Washington State Liquor Control Board recently introduced preliminary rules for buying and selling marijuana.

The state may create a point discipline system that would determine whether a resident would be allowed to grow and sell recreational marijuana.

Sales are likely to begin in early 2014, according to news reports.

ILLINOIS AND CHICAGO

This month, the Illinois Senate approved legislation that would legalize marijuana for people with serious illness. The Illinois House approved the bill in April. The legislation now is awaiting action from Gov. Quinn.

Last year, the Chicago City Council approved rules to decriminalize marijuana possession. Instead of arrest, carrying small amounts of pot brings a fine of at least $250.

CTA curbs some Ventra card fees

Chicago Tribune

The CTA will waive a $5 fee for riders who get the new Ventra transit card before the end of the year, and it either will reduce or eliminate some other controversial service charges related to the card's debit account, officials said.

The changes, which amount to at least $500,000 in lost revenue per year, were made in the face of strong criticism about the Ventra card after the Tribune revealed a host of hidden fees two months ago.

Under a renegotiated deal between the transit agency and its Ventra partners, the CTA agreed not to collect a guaranteed minimum share on prepaid debit fees collected on the card that agency officials had predicted would be higher than $500,000. "We reduced the amount to zero," CTA spokesman Brian Steele said.

But the CTA still will receive revenue from Ventra-related advertising as well as a portion of the profits from a transit benefits program used by commuters to save on taxes, Steele said.

The Ventra fare-collection system is slated to be rolled out late this summer, Steele said. The contactless card will replace the popular Chicago Card and Chicago Card Plus for CTA and PACE riders next year.

Since its introduction, the new system

BUS TRACKER UPDATE

By summer, all 25 No. J14 Jeffery Jump buses will have on-board Bus Tracker screens, which show arrival times for buses that connect to the route, CTA spokeswoman Tammy Chase said Friday. Other buses also may eventually get these screens. REDEYE has been vehemently criticized by consumer groups and elected officials, forcing CTA officials to reduce or eliminate a number of fees connected to an optional MasterCard debit account that initially was billed as a benefit to low-income riders.

In March, officials announced that the agency eliminated a $2.95 charge to reload the Ventra prepaid debit account online and a $10-per-hour charge for "account research" to resolve billing discrepancies. Both services will be provided for free. Additionally, Steele said Friday, Ventra debit card customers won't face a previously proposed $2 charge to talk on the phone with a Ventra customer assistant.

A fee to obtain a paper monthly statement will be reduced to $1, from $2, officials said. And customers who decide to quit the Ventra program altogether will be charged a $5 balance refund fee, instead of $6, officials said.

Obama pays tribute to fallen

ARLINGTON, Va. President Obama paid tribute Monday to fallen men and women of the armed services during a Memorial Day ceremony in which he reminded Americans that the country still is at war.

During a solemn visit to Arlington National Cemetery, the resting ground for many military casualties, Obama noted in remarks to visitors that next year would mark the last Memorial Day of the U.S. war in Afghanistan.

"But even as we turn the page on a decade of conflict, even as we look forward, let us never forget, as we gather here today, that our nation is still at war," Obama said.

Unlike World War II or the Vietnam War, conflicts that touched nearly every American, today most citizens were not directly affected by the military conflicts overseas, the president noted.

"As we gather here today, at this very moment, more than 60,000 of our fellow Americans still serve far from home in Afghanistan," Obama said.

Most U.S. combat troops are slated to exit Afghanistan by the end of 2014. Obama formally ended the war in Iraq earlier in his White House tenure.

In a major policy speech last week, Obama said the country would shift its focus away from a "boundless global war on terror" that began under his predecessor, George W. Bush.

After his remarks Monday, Obama and first lady Michelle Obama visited Section 60 of the cemetery, where the newly slain are buried.

Bomb suspect had 'detailed checklist'

Authorities in northwestern Oregon said Sunday that a teenager arrested Thursday night for producing what authorities called explosives for a Columbine-style attack on his high school had meticulously planned his foiled bombing. "He was definitely following a detailed checklist," said Capt. Eric Carter of the Albany police department about the 17-year-old, Grant Acord.

Scores killed in wave of Baghdad bombs

More than 70 people were killed in a wave of bombings in markets in Shi'ite neighborhoods across Baghdad on Monday in worsening sectarian violence in Iraq. No group claimed responsibility for the blasts, but Sunni Muslim Islamist insurgents and al-Qaida's Iraqi wing have increased attacks since the beginning of the year.

McCain meets with Syrian rebels

Sen. John McCain (R-Ariz.), a former presidential candidate and an outspoken advocate for U.S. military aid to the Syrian opposition, met with some of the rebels during a surprise visit to the war-torn country Monday, his spokesman said. The visit may fuel pressure on Washington to intervene in a conflict that is believed to have claimed 80,000 lives.

Marian Hossa (center) celebrates his goal against Detroit in the first period Monday.

Hawks get even with Detroit, and Toews is ecstatic. Can't you tell?

It's often the case that as Jonathan Toews goes, so go the Blackhawks. He's had a rough series against Detroit, especially with three penalties in Game 4. The captain did notch his first goal of the playoffs in Game 5 to help keep his team alive, and the spotlight was on him in Monday's do-or-die Game 6 in Detroit. Could the Hawks force Game 7? You could tell how Monday's game was going by Toews' expression. REDEYE

Jonathan Toews draws a penalty in the first period.
BRIAN CASSELLA/TRIBUNE

1ST PERIOD

GOAL! Marian Hossa cashes in on a Hawks power play, with none other than Toews getting an assist. That oughta improve his mood.

Uh-oh. Toews shoves Johan Franzen into Jimmy Howard, earning him a ticket to the penalty box. Captain gets his pound of flesh, but that temper's still not in check.

Red Wings star Pavel Datsyuk hopscoches around the entire Hawks defense and almost scores, but Corey Crawford balls out his teammates. The Captain is most pleased.

Late in the period, Crawford surrenders a rebound, and Patrick Eaves beats the goalie on the short side. The Captain is NOT pleased.

SCORE: BLACKHAWKS 1, RED WINGS 1

Corey Crawford gives up a goal in the second period.
BRIAN CASSELLA/TRIBUNE

2ND PERIOD

Hossa has Howard dead to rights after a nifty pass by Toews, but the Detroit goaltender slams the door. Still, one of these has to get through, right?

Toews squeezes through the Red Wings penalty killers and has Howard one on one, but he can't hit pay dirt. This feels a lot like Game 4, unfortunately.

Crawford smothers a very dangerous chance by Henrik Zetterberg in the goal mouth, preserving the tie. Your turn again. Hawks offense.

Crap. Joakim Andersson knuckles one past Crawford from another ZIP code for a heartbreakingly soft goal. Urge to destroy Zamboni... rising ...

SCORE: RED WINGS 2, BLACKHAWKS 1

Michael Frolik (67) celebrates his penalty-shot goal against Detroit.
BRIAN CASSELLA/TRIBUNE

3RD PERIOD

GOAL! Less than a minute into the third period, Michal Handzus is wide open in front of the net and beats Howard. Urge to destroy Zamboni... fading ...

GOAL! This time, Toews throws one to the front of the net, where big, bad Bryan Bickell powers it the rest of the way for a Hawks lead. Hold on. Hold on. Hold on.

GOAL! GOAL! GOAL! Michael Frolik is awarded a penalty shot, and he lifts one past Howard on the glove side. Do we hear Game 7?

Game 7. Wednesday. Even after a late Red Wings goal made things awfully scary, Blackhawks Nation's despair is nowhere to be found. Same goes for Toews'.

SCORE: BLACKHAWKS 4, RED WINGS 3

1	Give fans a reason to watch the Crosstown Classic.	Derrick Rose could play. He hasn't been ruled out.	Alex Rios. Baseball pants. Boom.	I'm not gonna lie. I'll be too busy watching "Arrested Development" on Netflix.	C.B. Bucknor's mastery of the third-base umpire position.	Nothing better than a fight on the Red Line. ... Oh, you meant baseball?
2	Why does Adam Dunn expect a "playoff atmosphere" for the Crosstown Classic?	Derrick Rose could play. He hasn't been ruled out.	He does know it's Cubs/Sox, right?	Insert Jim Mora "playoffs?" sound bite here.	The presence of oxygen.	Because many of the Cubs players will have no idea what it feels like.
3	What was Mike Ditka thinking when the Bears decided to retire his number?	"Huh? I have to go to Soldier Field? That's bull! Sleep!! Is Derrick Rose playing?"	"I wonder if I can finally get a table at Ditka's now."	"How do I name a menu item after this?"	"Quantum gravity falls apart due to its reliance on untestable predictions."	"I wonder what Ricky Williams and that dress are up to."
4	Now that the Chicago Sky's season is under way Derrick Rose COULD play. He hasn't been ruled out.	... I can totally not go to any games again!	... we answer the annual token WNBA question in 5 on 5.	... Derrick Rose is ready to go!	... we can look forward to the ever popular "invisible fan" night.
5	What should we expect to see during the French Open?	Again ... I'm holding out hope! Derrick Rose COULD play. He hasn't been ruled out.	Djokovic Serbian domination!	Michael Bluth is gonna find money in a banana stand.	Tennis? Or golf. It's probably one of those.	Serena Williams dancing to that one Kanye song. What's it called? Something about Paris.

Jeff Samardzija picks a fine time to pitch his first big-league shutout

Two teams that appear headed in opposite directions met head-on Monday night at U.S. Cellular Field.

The soaring White Sox—relatively speaking—had won nine of their previous 12 games to arrive at the .500 mark and in third place in the AL Central. Meanwhile, the Cubs needed an extra-inning win over the Reds on Sunday to snap a six-game losing streak.

Yet it was the Cubs behind starter Jeff Samardzija who looked more invincible. Samardzija tossed a masterful two-hitter, and the Cubs offense came alive for a 7-0 victory in front of 30,631 fans. It was Samardzija's first big-league shutout.

Sox rookie Conor Gillaspie collected a clean lead-off single in the third inning and Alexei Ramirez lined a two-out base hit in the ninth.

There's no denying the Cubs/Sox series will never get old for most of the players or even their managers.

"Fans like it. I think that any city that has two teams ... it's fun, it's different," Sox manager Robin Ventura said. "I think it breaks up your season as far as rivalries and everything else. It's always fun atmosphere-wise to have these games going."

Cubs manager Dale Sveum is of the same mindset.

"It breaks up the monotony of 162 games," Sveum said. "Sometimes you need a little extra, or whatever. It's probably a good time for our team to have something like this."

The Cubs entered the game with a 4-10 record against left-handed starters. Following Quintana, the Sox are scheduled to start lefties Chris Sale and John Danks against the Cubs. The first two games of this series are at the Cell before the two teams shift to Wrigley Field for games Wednesday and Thursday afternoons. Right-hander Jake Peavy will break up the string of Sox left-handed starters Thursday.

Cubs general manager Jed Hoyer said he is baffled that his team has not done better against lefties because of the career history of Cubs right-handed hitters such as Scott Hairston, Alfonso Soriano, Starlin Castro, Darwin Barney and Wellington Castillo.

"Kind of surprising, to be honest with you," Hoyer said Monday. "Hairston kills lefties. Castillo, Soriano and Castro should hit those guys well."

Peterson against gay marriage

Minnesota Vikings running back Adrian Peterson said he has family members who are gay whom he loves, but he is against gay marriage. "I have relatives who are gay. ... I love 'em. But again, I'm not with [gay marriage]," he said last week on Sirius/XM NFL Radio. Gay marriage will become legal in Minnesota on Aug. 1.

The University of Illinois baseball team earned an at-large NCAA tournament bid and will face Georgia Tech in Nashville on Friday. The Illini (34-18) were selected Monday to the 64-team field as a No. 3 seed, making the tournament for the second time in the last three seasons.

Arrr! It's your very own pirate ship, matey

CNN

The Mississippi River: home to grand old paddle steamers, blues music, Huckleberry Finn and ... pirate ships.

With its skull-and-crossbones flag flapping in the wind and a swashbuckling captain at the helm, this is perhaps the last boat you'd expect to find on America's most famous inland waterway. But the 39-foot Gypsy Rose II is just one of six pirate ships built by 54-year-old Captain Tim Woodson and setting sail on the iconic river.

Now the buccaneering boat has been sold to the History Channel for $80,000, after being advertised on Craigslist. It will become part of the reality series called "Ax Men," which follows the history of timber cutters.

"It's probably the most photographed ship on the Mississippi River," said Woodson, of St. Louis. "We get a lot of kids running along the shore, trying to catch the cannonballs as we go by," he said, referring to the 4-inch sponge balls shot from the ship.

The professional boat builder first started making pirate ships five years ago, converting ordinary house boats into fairytale vessels.

"I wanted to find an old boat that I could transform into something really cool," Woodson said. "My girlfriend asked: 'What are you going to do?' I don't know where it came from, but I said: 'I'm going to build a pirate ship.'"

That's exactly what he did, adding fake masts and covering the boat in planks of wood stained with varnish and black spray paint.

"As you walk on board, you see a skeleton wearing an eye patch—that's the old captain we pillaged the boat from," Woodson said. "The sails are all torn with cannonball holes. Inside, the first thing you see is a hand-drawn map, globe of the world, and an old desk covered in treasure."

The boat may appear to be something out of a 17th century European fable, but inside it has all the luxuries of a modern ship. Woodson spent just over two months building Gypsy Rose II, which can hold around 30 passengers. It features two bedrooms, a bathroom and a kitchen, and putters along at 18.6 mph.

With his battered hat, ripped vest, and dangling earring, Captain Woodson is every inch the pirate of old. Alongside his girlfriend, Wench Maria, he can be found steering his fantastical vessels from Missouri to Illinois as part of sightseeing tours down the murky Mississippi.

Groups also can rent the boats for pirate-themed parties. One elderly woman recently celebrated her 99th birthday on board.

"When I was a kid, pirates were cool and that hasn't changed," Woodson said. "It's about that feeling of being free, of being an explorer. It gives you an excuse to be the bad boy."

Not the vintage Mustang! No!!!!

Los Angeles Times

It didn't have to be like this. In the age of green screens and VFX houses, filmmakers responsible for the sixth installment of the "Fast & Furious" franchise didn't have to actually destroy hundreds of cars.

They didn't have to run over a custom 1969 Ford Mustang with a tank. The 2008 BMW M5, one of several demolished, didn't need to be thrown through a building. And the 1970 Ford Escort Mark 1—beloved in Britain—didn't need to be tossed 70 feet in the air over a freeway divider with a live stunt driver behind the wheel. Twice.

"He likes to use as little CG as possible," said Dennis McCarthy of "Fast & Furious 6" director Justin Lin, referring to computer-generated imagery. From his sprawling shop in Los Angeles' Sun Valley neighborhood, McCarthy has assembled and modified millions of dollars of cars for each of the last four "Fast" films Lin has directed.

Fans of the "Fast" franchise are more eager to see two tons of steel with 600 horsepower on the big screen than they are to hear Vin Diesel growl one-liners or see Michelle Rodriguez and mixed martial arts fighter-turned-actor Gina Carano throw each other down a flight of stairs.

This means the computers play only a minor role as hundreds of cars—and the souls brave enough to drive them—become the true heroes and villains of "Fast & Furious 6."

Which explains why audiences are treated to the memorable sight of a small blue Ford Escort hurtling through the air like an errant metal softball.

The stunt was a product of a messy trial-and-error process, McCarthy explained as he stood over one of the only examples of the Ford Escort Mark 1 to survive the shoot. The sheer number of stunts left little time for planning.

The scene calls for Paul Walker's character to jump the median of a highway in his car, to come to the aid of Tyrese Gibson's character, whose Ford Mustang is quickly being overrun by a tank.

The first live attempt at jumping the car didn't go as planned. With too much speed carried off the ramp, the car overshot its landing and came down nose-first, flipping violently onto its roof and destroying the car.

"It really rung the driver's bell," McCarthy said, chuckling.

After making some quick adjustments to a second car and hitting the ramp at a few mph slower, the crew was able to get the shot we see. Barely.

Though it landed and successfully drove out of the shot, McCarthy said, the impact left the car "shaped like a banana."

ROMANCE PLANET

BY JENNIFER SHEPHERD | READ MORE AT LIPSTICKMYSTIC.COM

Gemini May 21-June 21
Venus is increasing the chances that you encounter a soulmate. If you're single, you finally could meet someone who shares your views on life. If you're in a so-so relationship, you might discover the two of you get along better.

Cancer June 22-July 22
Mercury is in your sign for a few weeks, increasing your sexual charisma. You'll attract attention everywhere you go. Someone gorgeous who never knew you were alive suddenly will be hanging onto your every word.

Leo July 23-Aug. 22
Passionate Fire signs like you can fall instantly, hopelessly in love, and it doesn't always work out. With the moon opposite your sign, you could fall under somebody's spell. Don't fall victim to the wrong kind of sexual magic.

Virgo Aug. 23-Sept. 22
The moon is helping you understand someone better. You see the connection between your boyfriend's crazy, controlling mother and his fear of romantic commitment.

Libra Sept. 23-Oct. 23
Try hanging out with winners instead of losers. Jupiter is showing you that you don't need to date that slacker dude who lives with five unwashed roommates or that lazy chick.

Scorpio Oct. 24-Nov. 21
You might have a heart-to-heart conversation with someone who reveals some juicy information. Mercury is increasing your need to tell and hear the truth. You could uncover a mystery about your partner.

Sagittarius Nov. 22-Dec. 21
With a bunch of planets opposite your sign, don't make any sudden moves. It's not the best time to file for divorce, get engaged or decide to have a kid. You need more clarity about your current situation first.

Capricorn Dec. 22-Jan. 19
You're having problems deciding what you want out of your love life. Maybe you'd be happy living as a nun or a monk. Or perhaps ultimate bliss is to be found in a polygamous situation. Mercury says keep thinking.

Aquarius Jan. 20-Feb. 18
You'll receive some good news, courtesy of a friendly sun. At last, your ex will "friend" you on Facebook even though you refused to return his favorite DVDs.

Pisces Feb. 19-March 20
You're not quite sure about your relationship. Venus is pulling you in two directions. You adore him, but you think he's a little too stupid to be your life partner.

Aries March 21-April 19
It's time to have "the chat" with someone. This won't be fun, but it's necessary. Have a frank talk with your honey. Venus says this will pay off.

Taurus April 20-May 20
You're in a frisky mood, thanks to the moon. If you and your partner have fallen into a dull routine, shake things up. Aim for a change of scene. Make love on a rooftop, in the backyard or in your car.

STORYTELLING AND PUBLIC HISTORY

Chicagoans understand their history as much through each other's stories as through history books. Chicago Public Library examines this tradition and the way our stories celebrate the many cultures of our city with the current One Book, One Chicago selection of Isabel Wilkerson's The Warmth Of Other Suns, and the broader theme of how migration has shaped Chicago. On Thursday, June 6 at 6 p.m., join author Miles Harvey, artist Samantha Hill, Albany Park Theatre Project director David Feiner, historian Jennifer Brier and moderator Dawn Turner Trice of the Chicago Tribune, for a discussion of how storytelling informs our understanding of history and shapes our culture. The free event takes place in the Cindy Pritzker Auditorium at the Harold Washington Library Center, 400 S. State St. Presented in partnership with Chicago Tribune, Printers Row Lit Fest. For more information, visit onebookonechicago.org or call (312) 747-4050.

Smooth moves

David Schwimmer is no slouch on the dance floor—no, seriously

ABOUT LAST NIGHT

Luis Gomez

*@aboutluisgomez

David Schwimmer apparently has more dance moves than just the ones he demonstrated by the water fountain in the famous intro for "Friends."

The 46-year-old actor and director told Interview magazine last year that he was a "pretty good dancer" back in the day and reiterated that sentiment when I asked him about it Wednesday at the Michigan Avenue magazine party at The Dec Rooftop Lounge + Bar in the Ritz-Carlton Chicago hotel.

"I'm not a trained dancer, but I'm a good dancer," said Schwimmer, who appears on the magazine's May/June cover. "I enjoy dancing. People say I have good rhythm. My wife certainly enjoys it."

If you think Schwimmer is talking about the waltz or the fox trot simply because he is best known for playing the nerdy Ross Geller on "Friends," you would be wrong. "Not like ballroom dancing," Schwimmer said. "I used to have some training in high school as a tap dancer, but it's been over 30 years. More like club dancing." Does that include hip-hop dancing? "Oh yeah," Schwimmer said.

Schwimmer said he hasn't had much use for dancing in his career, other than when he appeared on "Curb Your Enthusiasm" in 2004 to play Larry David's co-star in "The Producers."

"It finally came in handy," Schwimmer said.

Speaking of theater, Schwimmer is directing Lookingglass Theatre's production of "Big Lake Big City," running June 19-Aug. 11 at the Water Tower Water Works. He co-founded Lookingglass 25 years ago, and he's a Northwestern alum, which might explain why Chicago seems to claim the New York native as its own.

"I have noticed that," said Schwimmer, who lives in New York. "I'm thrilled about it. I claim [Chicago], too, even though I wasn't born here. I always felt more at home here than where I was born. It's always special for me to come back to Chicago."

HOT DATE

JUNE 2

That's when Muse will perform for 15,000 fans after the premiere of "World War Z" in London. billboard.com reports. About 14 minutes of the band's music is used in the zombie apocalypse film.

THE DIGIT

$314 MILLION

That's the worldwide box office draw for "Fast & Furious 6" this weekend—the best of any "Fast and Furious" movie and a record for Universal Studios, according to thr.com. The lesson here: fast cars + explosions + Dwayne Johnson = DOLLARS.

Nasty casting call

Are you a man age 18 or older with, ahem, a very strong stomach? Send an email to director Tom Six, whose "Human Centipede 3" began shooting Friday. He's looking for 10 fans to become a part of the new, 500-person centipede, aveclub.com reports. According to a casting notice, you won't have to take off your clothes, but you will have to... well, you probably should know by now.

The troubled star plans to sue the NYPD for "mistaken arrest," lying about her drug use and putting her in a mental hospital against her will. Yikes. Let's hope whatever is going on with Bynes gets sorted out soon.

NO MORE SCHOOLBOY STUFF. A CAMEO AS HARRY'S DAD? THAT WOULD BE PERFECT!"

—Daniel Radcliffe, to Time Out London, saying he wouldn't want to play Harry Potter again even if J.K. Rowling wrote another book

Katy Perry and Robert Pattinson

They're single and ready to... crash weddings? While they weren't exactly behaving like a couple, the two friends sat in on a wedding rehearsal Saturday in Santa Barbara, Calif., people.com reports. The strangest part: Neither one was affiliated with anyone in the wedding party. Hmm...
